Nashville-based singer-songwriter, Brida, writes piano pop with cinematic and electronic influences. Her songs will lull you in with dreamy piano lines and intimate stories before blowing you away with unexpected synths and powerhouse vocals. Her musical influences range from impressionist composer, Claude Debussy, to Adele, to Twenty-One-Pilots, creating a fusion of sounds that is all her own. But perhaps her greatest influence to date is her Twin Flame. It was their fated meeting that lit the spark to what is now the creative inferno, Brida music.

BRIDA may be the new kid on the block as an artist, but her fanbase is fascinated by her unique story and the vulnerability in which she openly shares. Her powerful music shares a deeply personal journey on her upcoming debut album, Down in Flames, out August 22, 2021.

The entire album was inspired by meeting the other half of her soul, her Twin Flame, and how much she regrets never having a conversation about their connection.

Each song was born out of the emotions she kept to herself for years.

Her second single ‘You Found Me’ was accompanied by her first music video. This particular track explores the deep loss that she felt when her Twin Flame disappeared from her life. She used the pain to go inward and heal, burning away everything inauthentic about her life, and emerging stronger than ever before. In the music video, she sets fire to a piano and lets it burn to the ground in representation of this process.

Brida comments on the song: “You Found Me’ is not only the first track on the album, but I also chose to release it as a single first because it tells my story from the very moment it began and where it led to after. That moment being when I laid eyes on my Twin Flame for the first time and I knew my life would never be the same. And it eventually led to him no longer being in my life, and me having to process why the most important soul connection one could ever have would show up and then leave with no explanation. That deep love that was met with even deeper loss is what inspired not only this single, but every track on the album.”

About her hopes for the album, Brida states, “I want the listeners to have a catharsis as they listen to the album. Although it was inspired by my Twin Flame connection, it is really about love, loss, and the growth that happens from those places. I think anyone who has experienced the loss of “the one” will be able to see themselves in the lyrics. I want them to cry along, sing along, and heal along as each song progresses from ecstasy to grief to acceptance.
